

Moments, points of interest and interaction. Lightly scripted scenes with guidelines of what story points to hit, but can be more freeform and have visitors enter/exit scenes whenever they please. More freeform, allows all actors to participate as opposed to some being “security” for scenes. I believe this format will also allow the village to feel more “full” and lively, as opposed to all scenes having closed doors and forcing people to wait for scenes to begin. The doors to all scenes could be open and visitors could be free to walk through and hear what our 19th century actors have to say about their Christmases and how they are celebrating.
